Core of the intelligence in this report:

Hoecherl is vehemently opposed to the promises Brentano made on foreign aid, and states that Brentano had not been authorized to make them. Even if he was authorized by Adenauer, the Chancellor had no right to do this. Hoecherl will tell him so, and the Bundestag will not provide the funds. The other Bundestag delegates in this conversation exhibited a cynical attitude.

Comment: Is there a possibility that the Bundestag will refuse to vote whatever appropriations the Chancellor finally decides to ask for?
